Artist Bio

“Born and raised in Virginia, I attended the Corcoran College of Art and Design for my B.F.A. and returned for a Masters of Arts in Teaching. I currently teach S.T.E.A.M. and Woodworking at a private school in St John, US Virgin Island.

My work has a tendency to be whimsical and oftentimes has a comical element to it as well, seeking to create conversation about stereotypical and/or juxtaposing views. My recent work focuses on the stereotypes of the male and female gender. These works ask viewers to directly engage with the human form and with their own perceptions and biases.”
